Opus strengthens its management team with a new CFO

- New Chief Financial Officer to take Opus to OMX

Following the acquisition of former American partner SysTech International during this spring, Opus Prodox AB (publ) now expands its management team with a new CFO. The appointment of a new CFO is done partly to meet the tougher requirements that follows from a listing on OMX Small Cap, but also to strengthen the organisation ahead of the expected growth that the Group faces during the coming years.

Opus is an industrial high-tech manufacturer of equipment for environmental- and safety testing of vehicles with operations in more than 50 countries all over the world. The Group consists of ten companies with approx. 150 employees in total and now Tomas Jonson, with several years of experience in the financial markets, is recruited as CFO. Tomas Jonson joins Opus September 1st and comes directly from Nordea Corporate Finance. Prior to that Tomas worked at The Royal Bank of Scotland (RBS). Amongst Tomas first assignments will be to take Opus from First North to OMX Small Cap during this fall.

– During this spring I have worked closely with Opus and gotten to know the company well, says Tomas Jonson. Opus is a very interesting company with secure revenues, high profit margins and strong growth potential in a promising industry. Therefore it is with great pleasure and excitement I now join the Group and take part of the coming year's expansion, Tomas ends.

Tomas Jonson has worked with corporate finance in Stockholm for approx. four years. Tomas has a Bachelor's degree in Business from The London School of Economics and Political Science (LSE). His main tasks at Opus will be to lead the Group's finance function and work with the company's new business opportunities and future potential acquisitions. In addition, Tomas will together with Opus CEO be responsible for the company's investor relations activities and financial reporting as well as meeting with research analysts.

– It is with great pleasure I now welcome Tomas onboard Opus management team. In the coming process of taking Opus to OMX we will have great support from our financial adviser, Nordea Corporate Finance, but of course having Tomas onboard as CFO will be an additional asset to us. Following the acquisition of SysTech we have a totally different position globally and it is therefore completely rational that we now strengthen the company's management team. Tomas will be a highly valuable complement to the existing management team and I look forward to being colleagues, says Magnus Greko, CEO and President of Opus.
